Promise to Coppus Josep and Taldus Janiani, merchants of the society of the Frescobaldi of Florence, to pay them, by All Saints next, 926l. 11s. 6d. sterling. An account was made between John de Drokennesford, king's clerk, keeper of the Wardrobe, and Paschiasius Valenti, called Ladail of Aragon, touching 1,637l. Os. 21d. sterling due, as appears by divers letters of Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, the king's lieutenant in the duchy, to him for wages and compensation for horses for the time that he was on the king's service with horses and arms in the duchy of Aquitaine, whereby it appeared that besides divers sums of money which the said Paschiasius had received from the Exchequer, and from divers ministers, merchants, and subjects at divers times, the said sum remained due to him, which the said merchants have bound themselves to pay; and after paying Paschiasius they are to surrender to the king or the treasurer the five letters of the earl of Lincoln, whereby the king was bound to Paschiasius in 1,637l. Os. 21d. sterling, their receipt for the said 926l. 11s. 6d. sterling, and the present letters.

Promise to the same merchants to pay, in equal portions, at All Saints next and the All Saints following, 1,680l. (residue of 1,982l. 12s. 3d. sterling due to divers merchants of Spain, for loans and goods supplied for the king's affairs to Henry de Lacy, earl of Lincoln, the king's lieutenant in
