whereas Alexander had entered a messuage, four shops and four solers in London, late of Walter le Poter, as kinsman and heir of the latter, and had long held the same as his inheritance, the then mayor and sheriffs of the city, at the suit of some persons falsely representing that Walter had made a will with themselves as executors, putting the premises at their disposal, proceeded improperly in the proof and admission of the said will, favoured the said executors and refused to allow the pleadings of Alexander in his right at the hustings and wrongly gave judgment against him. They are to meet at St. Martin's le Grand, London, and having inspected and examined the record and process of the whole matter, the will and the proof, in presence of the said mayor and sheriffs, and having heard the parties and the pleadings, they are to correct the error, if any, therein.
