The prior of Kertemel, staying in England, has letters nominating William le Surrays, his fellow canon, and William de Lyndale his attorneys in Ireland for two years.

In September, in the seventh year of his reign, the king caused the manors of Hyremere and Belestre, which latter manor is commonly called 'Folye Jon,' co. Berks, belonging to John, bishop of Bath and Wells, to be taken into his hands, together with stock sufficient for the manors, and with the corn then in the barns of the manors, intending to buy the manors, stock and corn from the bishop; afterwards the king commanded W. archbishop of Canterbury and John de Sandale, king's clerk, the chancellor, to make sufficient satisfaction in his name to the bishop for the said manors, stock of 2
