Bristol, and certain men of the town, and the king, at the request of Thomas, earl of Lancaster, had granted a safe-conduct to certain men of the town, provided they had not been outlawed at his suit or that of Bartholomew de Badelesmere, to go to Warwick to treat of the settlement of such disputes, and whereas in the presence of Guy de Bello Campo, earl of Warwick, and of John de Sandale the chancellor, an agreement has been arrived at touching such dissensions, and also of other dissensions between William Randolf and certain other burgesses of the same town, who were lately deprived by judgment of the liberty of the town, and their adherents of the one part, and other men of the same town of the other part, the king desiring that such dissensions should be allayed, grants a special licence to the commonalty of the town of Bristol, certain outlawed men of the same commonalty excepted, to ratify and confirm by letters sealed with their seal all the agreements made in the presence of the said earl and chancellor as well touching the disputes with Bartholomew de Badelesmere as those between them and the said William Randolf and others who had been deprived of the liberty of the town as above said.
