Commission to Henry de Percy, Thomas de Seton, Richard Tempest, John Heroun, John Moubray and Roger de Blaykeston, reciting that whereas of late the king by letters patent granted licence for the mayor, bailiffs and good men of Newcastle upon Tyne to dig and get up coals and stone in the common soil of the town without the walls, in places called ' Le Chastefeld ' and Le Frith, he has now learned on behalf of the prior of Tynemouth that the said mayor and others, exceeding their licence, have dug in the prior's moor adjoining their lands in the said places as defined by metes and bounds put there of ancient time, and are planning to make a sewer there to the destruction of his coal mine in the moor, which is the greatest part of the sustenance of the prior and his priory ; and appointing them to survey the places of Le Chastefeld and Le Frith, to inform themselves by inquisition taken in the presence of the mayor and bailiffs of the town, if they will attend, and other means, touching the ancient metes and bounds between the soil of the prior and the soil of the town and cause these to be repaired where necessary, and in case there are no metes and bounds there to ordain and put certain and evident bounds to endure for ever, and to certify the king under their seals of all that they do herein. The king has commanded the coroners of Northumberland to send jurors before them at such days as they appoint. By C.

Mandate to the said mayor and bailiffs to stay execution of the king's licence aforesaid until the morrow of the Ascension.
