in the place of Edmund, earl of March, Thomas de Bello Campo, earl of Warwick, William de Ufford, earl of Suffolk, Master Walter de Skirlawe and Master John de Shepeye, as they must be occupied about certain arduous matters with which the king has charged them. (See p. 487.)

April 26.

Westminster. Commission to Diggory Seys, 'chivaler,'—as the king has learned that many of his enemies and their adherents gathered together with a great multitude of armed men purpose within a short time to invade the land and lordship of Wales, especially in the county and lordship of Pembroke, and to destroy, depopulate and harass the lordship and the king's people and subjects there by land and sea,—to survey, repair and fortify the castle and town of Pembrok, the castle and town of Teneby and the castle of Kilgarren, furnish and array them with arms, armour, victuals and other necessaries, to wit, the castles at the king's costs to be paid by the receiver of the said lordships by the commissioner's order and warrant, and the towns at the costs of the burgesses and others bound to contribute to their fortification; and also to survey the other castles and fortresses in the said county, to wit, the castles of Maynerbiere, Carieu, Pilton and Nieuport, and all others which might fitly be held, compel and distrain by all means their lords to have them repaired and sufficiently furnished and arrayed with armed men and archers, victuals and other necessaries, under pain of forfeiture; and also to array all defensible men of the said county and lordship, have them furnished with arms and armour, have them kept in array, always ready to resist the malice of the king's enemies, compel and distrain all who owe any services of war at the castle of Pembrok and the other castles and towns aforesaid to do such services, do all things necessary or advantageous for the safety and defence of the said county and lordships, even by distraint and sale of the goods of those who are negligent or rebellious, and arrest and commit to prison until further order all who are contrariant, or rebellious.
