By an inquisition taken by William de Clapham, escheator in the counties of York, Northumberland, Cumberland and Westmoreland, it has been found that in the year 1265 Peter de Bruce the third, sometime lord of the manor of Carleton in Balne, held in chief, granted in fee to John de Burton, knight, a messuage, sixty-seven tofts, thirteen bovates and 4 acres of land, 342¼ acres of waste land, 7 acres of meadow, and 9 acres of pasture, in the manor, by the rent of 6d. or a pair of gilt spurs, payable at Christmas, that the said John, Roger de Burton, his brother and heir, and Roger de Burton son and heir of the latter, successively entered into and held these for their lives, and that Roger de Burton, knight, son and heir of the last named, who is still alive, also entered into the same, although no licence had ever been obtained from any king, and held them until they were taken into the king's hands by the escheator on account of these trespasses. In consideration of the fact that the alienation was made in the time of Henry III. and of a fine made with him by the present Roger de Burton the king has pardoned the trespasses and has restored the messuage, tofts and lands.
