Oct. 25. By letters patent of 10 February, 12 Edward III. the king pardoned his kinsman, Henry de Bello Monte, earl of Boghan, all debts then due by him at the Exchequer and those of Alice, countess of Boghan, his wife, except 400 marks lately delivered to him at York for his deliverance from prison in Scotland; but, although it was the king's intention at the time of such pardon that the earl should be discharged of all reliefs, accounts, fines, and arrears required of him to that date, yet he is distrained for divers accounts due and reliefs, fines and arrears, as well of the time of himself and the countess as of the times of their ancestors, prior to that date. Wishing to provide for his security herein, the king has pardoned him all these.
