granted in fee to William de Courcy his son the manors of Moureholm, Warton, Wyresdale, Essheton and Quytington, and a moiety of the town of Ulverstone, with the advowson of the priory of Conysete, co. Lancaster, and the manor of Wynandermere, a moiety of the town of Kyrkeby in Kendale, and lands in Casterton, with the mills there and the advowsons of the chapels of Wynandermere, Marielholm and Gressemere, co. Westmoreland, whereof Christiana died seised in her demesne as of fee and great part is held in chief by barony, as appears by the said inquisition, without the homage and fealty of William the father having been taken for the lands so held in chief, or livery of these and the other lands having been made by the king in the usual manner; and whereas, at the request of the count of Hainault, his father, the king pardoned the trespasses herein, as well as the relief which William, the father, should have rendered for the lands, ratified the grant as above, took the homage and fealty of William, the son, for the lands held in chief, and restored the lands to the latter, as is more fully contained in letters patent; as a further grace he has granted to him the knights' fees pertaining to the lands to hold to him and his heirs in like manner as Christiana held them. Furthermore, whereas William, the father, by charter which the king has inspected, granted in fee to William, the son, the reversion of the lands in Essheton, Scotford and Quytington, co. Lancaster, Casterton, co. Westmoreland, and Middleton and Thorneton, co. York, with the knights' fees and the advowson of the church of Thorneton in Lonesdale pertaining to those lands, which Robert de Gynes, uncle of William, the son, held for life, although these have been taken into the king's hands because the said Robert is an adherent of his kinsmen of France against him, and afterwards granted by letters patent to William, the son, to hold for such time as they remain in the king's hands without rendering anything for the same, the king accepts and confirms the said grant by William, the father.
