Feb. 10. Commission to Walter de Henle, king's serjeant-at-arms, and Nicholas Dunstable. de Banbury to supervise the weight used by the collectors of the king's wool in the county of Salop in delivering the same wool to Hugh de Ulseby and his fellows, the merchants to whom the king has sold the wool granted to him in his last Parliament in the county of Salop, as the merchants have given the king to understand that the collectors do not deliver the same by the right weight but by a counterfeit weight of less value, to test that weight by the standard weight which the king will deliver to them, to compel the collectors to make satisfaction for any deficiency in the weight of the wool already delivered, to bring the false weight into the chancery, and leave the standard weight in the custody of the collectors under the seals of the said merchants or their attorneys until the wool be paid in full to the merchants; also to arrest all the wool they find in the county until the king be satisfied in full of his wool according to the sum apportioned to him there. By K. & C.
