Whereas the king lately appointed Walter de Percehay, John Moryn, Thomas de Levegham and William de Brewehous of Malton to collect in the North Riding, co. York, the wool granted to him by the commonalty of the realm in his twelfth year, the said Walter never intermeddled at all in the receipt of the said wool, but Thomas and William accounted in full for the same at the exchequer, as the king has heard; nevertheless the treasurer and barons of the exchequer, because in the endorsement on a writ returned there it is found that the said Walter, John, Thomas and William came to the exchequer accounting there by reason of the wool, grievously distress him to pay with the others 88l. of arrears due to the king on the account; the king accordingly pardons Walter the portion which pertains to him of such debt, which he has commanded to be apportioned between the other three by the treasurer and barons and discharges him as well of the fourth part of the said debt apportioned on him as of the other three parts apportioned on the others.
