MEMBRANE 32d.

Whereas the king of late caused proclamation to be made throughout the whole realm that no merchant or other, denizen or alien, should take corn or other victuals without the same save only to Gascony, Ireland, Flandres, Brittany, Brabant, Spain, Holand, Seland and Almain, and to those parts only from the ports of London, Southampton, Exeter, Dartmouth, Bristol, Great Yarmouth, Lynn, Boston, Kyngeston-upon-Hull, Colchester, Ipswich, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and after security found before the mayor and bailiffs of the town for the due delivery of the corn in those parts and the bringing back of letters attesting its discharge there; he now learns that great quantities of the aforesaid are shipped daily in ships, crayers and boats from these ports as well as from other ports and places in the water of Thames and other waters on the sea coast for lands at enmity with him and he has accordingly appointed Saier Lorimer as searcher for all such contraband goods, to arrest all such vessels as he shall find to have wools or other customable wares uncocketed or uncustomed, and keep them and their cargoes in custody until he give other order therein, and to certify him in the chancery from time to time of all that he does herein. By C.

Commission to John de Staunton, 'chivaler,' John Giffard, William de Notton, John de Baddeby and Thomas Talbot to make inquisitions in the counties of York and Lancaster touching an information that divers castles, manors, lands and fees and advowsons, which should have been taken into the hands of Edward II among other lands late of Thomas, earl of Lancaster, Robert de Holand and their adherents were not so taken but that immediately after the death of the said earl, Robert and their adherents divers men entered into the same and converted the goods in them to their own use and still detain and conceal the castles, manors and lands; also that lands have been alienated in mortmain there without
