Notification to J. bishop of Hereford, for the information of all concerned, that, whereas the king of late, at the suit of William de Jaye suggesting that there was a vicarage of Clonebury in his diocese and that the same was void and in the king’s gift, presented the said William thereto, he has since learned by a petition on behalf of the prior of Wenlok that the said town of Clonebury is no vicarage but a chapel annexed to the parish church of Clone, which he and the convent of the same place hold as appropriated; and that, having now been certified by the bishop in the chancery that he cannot find in his registers and the registers of his predecessors that in the town of Clonebury there is any perpetual vicarage or that any parson or vicar has at any time been admitted or instituted to such vicarage, and not willing that the prior be prejudiced in this behalf, especially as the priory is now in his hands among the other alien priories, he has seen fit to revoke the presentation.
