manor, for his use, and the value of such stock far exceeded that of the oaks and trees felled and sold; and that by letters patent the king granted licence for the said John to take for his own use two bucks in the forest, by virtue of which licence he hunted in the company of Gilbert de Imworth, the queen’s steward, in the presence of the deputy warden of the forest, in Paunsale, which is parcel of the said forest, about Holy Cross Day in the king’s twentieth year, at which time he took nothing of the venison of the forest nor did he at any time, before or after, hunt in the forest.

Grant to the king’s clerks, the warden and scholars of his hall at Cambridge, in furtherance of the late promise to them by letters patent of money for their charges about the buildings of a dwelling place or hall, of the 20l. which the preceptor of the house, called ‘la Maudeleyne’ in Lokhay, co. Derby, of the order of the knighthood of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem, now in the king’s hands on account of the war with France, has to render to the king yearly for his farm; to be received by them at the hands of the preceptor as a gift from the king.

Mandate in pursuance to the preceptor.

Whereas Edward II granted licence for John son of Baldwin Pycot to demise to John Pycot for life the manor of Ronhale, held in chief; the present king, for 13s. 4d., which the said John will pay him, has granted licence for his executors after his death to hold the manor for one year and take the issues and profits thereof for that time.

Whereas the king by letters patent has granted to the prior of Priermell, an alien, that he shall be quit of tenths, fifteenths, wools and other quota granted or to be granted by the clergy and the commonalty of the realm of England, from the time of the taking of the priory into the king’s hands because of the war; William de Bohun, earl of Northampton, has now made petition that the prior may be discharged of 20l at which he was lately assessed before the treasurer and other of the council at London for wools granted to the king by some of the clergy in aid of his war, to be paid at All Saints next, and the king, having regard to the charges which the house has to bear, acquits him accordingly.

Grant to Thomas de Lancastre that for the more prompt payment of the annuity of 100l. lately granted to him at the exchequer he shall receive in lieu thereof the farm of 100l. which the prior of Dormonton, an alien, has to pay yearly for his priory, now in the king’s hands on account of the war with France, for such time as the war shall endure. By p.s.

Vacated because surrendered for 200l. which the king commanded to be paid to Thomas by the treasurer and chamberlains out of his treasure in full satisfaction of the annuity, as appears on the Liberale Roll of the twenty-ninth year.

Richard, bishop of Ossory, staying in Ireland, has letters nominating William Folyn as his attorney for three years.

Thomas de Brayton received the attorney.

Whereas the king of late understanding that Master John de Strelke in the time when he stood in his service in Flanders was removed from his possession of the prebend of Bannebury, in the church of Lincoln, and afterwards recovered possession thereof by due process in the court of Canterbury, and that that prebend had been taken into his hands among other benefits of aliens because Bernard de Parma, a Lombard, in the time
