Nov. 10. Westminster. The abbot and convent of Certaseye have made petition to the king shewing that although their house has never before these times been charged with a pension for any clerk by reason of new creation of an abbott they are now harassed with pleas in the King's Bench at the king's suit on the prosecution of Thomas de Oldyngton, king's clerk, who has procured a grant of such pension by reason of the creation of the now abbot and praying for an indemnity herein; and inasmuch as it has been found by inquisition on the oath of good men of the county of Surrey that such a demand has never previously been made on the house, and on search in the exchequer and in the rolls of the chancery of the king's great grandfather, grandfather and father this finding is confirmed; and because the abbey is very often burdened with divers charges by frequent visits of the king's children and the lengthy stay of them and their household there, the king by these presents revokes the grant to Thomas of the pension and grants that the abbot and convent shall be for ever quit of such pension by reason of new creation of an abbot or be bound to pay it if he or his heirs grant such.
