To be held in chief, and to grant all his other liberties and lands in the lordship of Trym and elsewhere in Ireland, likewise held in chief, to the countess and her heirs, and for the countess to surrender the estate which she has for the life of Roger in the manors of Orleton, Penbrugge and Kyngeslane, co. Hereford, said to be held in chief, by demise of the said Roger, to him and his heirs. Licence also for Roger to grant these manors and the manor of Bremesgrave and Norton, co. Worcester, likewise held in chief (the advowsons of the churches of Penbrugge and Kyngeslane excepted) to the countess for her life, she rendering yearly 85l. for the manors of Orleton and Kyngeslane, in exchange for the said castle, town and manor of Trym, and all other castles and lands within the lordship of Trym. If the countess be removed at any time from her possession of the manors of Orleton, Penbrugge, Kyngeslane, Bremesgrave and Norton or any parcel of them by Roger or his heirs, by judgement or otherwise, or Roger or his heirs make distrainments on any tenants thereof for services, whereby the countess be prejudiced, she shall receive compensation in full, and if this be not done within three months she may enter into the said castles, manors and lands in Ireland, by whomsoever held, and hold the same to her and her heirs without contradiction. Licence also for Roger to grant to the countess for her life all advowsons pertaining to the same castles, manors, towns, lordships and lands in Ireland; and pardon to him for having at another time granted to her the manors of Orleton, Penbrugge and Kyngeslane, without licence, and to the countess for entering therein without licence.

Notification that, by a certificate of Hugh Pelegrini, surrogate of Raymond Pelegrini, the pope's nuncio in England, now abroad, it is found that all benefices of the pope's nuncios are reserved by a general reservation which every pope makes immediately on creation, and that Itherius de Concreto was the pope's nuncio, and resigned his benefices while such, to wit in 1395, and that benefices reserved by the pope cannot be conferred by a clerk patron, at any time so long as they are reckoned as void, until provided for by the pope or by apostolic authority, and that by another certificate made by John, bishop of Hereford, it appears that on searching his register it is not found that any one has succeeded Master Itherius de Concreto, late portioner in the portion of Overhalle, in the church of Ledebury, in the diocese of Hereford, down to the present time by apostolic authority or otherwise, and that Thomas, the immediate predecessor of the said John in the see, died on 11 January, 1348; as evidence of the king's right to confer the portion which fell vacant by the resignation of the said Itherius in form aforesaid and remained so by virtue of the reservation and resignation until the temporalities of the bishopric came into the king's hands by the death of the said bishop Thomas, because the pope after such resignation made no provision with respect to the portion.
