by judgment of good men elected for this purpose by faithful men of the realm, be found prejudicial or harmful to the king and his realm, it should be entirely withdrawn; that any obscurities and things to be corrected should be made clear and corrected, security being provided for the perpetual observance of these and other things, to wit, such as are good and useful for the king and the realm; that the realm should henceforth be governed by natives, faithful and useful, under the king, and aliens should go forth never to return, except those whom the faithful men of the realm in common will accept; the king grants that these things shall be observed and renounces all things done or to be done by any courts or persons whereby the effect of these presents could be impeded or deferred. In witness whereof, the king has procured the seal of his brother R. king of the Romans, with his own to be attached to these presents.

July 18. As peace has been restored between the king and his barons.

Westminster. whereby the king has committed the castle of Dover to H. bishop of London, in a form provided between the king and R. bishop of Lincoln, and R. bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, and the other the king's proctors and the said barons, the king commands Edmund his son and Robert de Glastonia, constable of the castle of Dover, to deliver the said castle to H. bishop of London, to keep in the said form; and to deliver to him also the victuals, wines, arms, crossbows (balistae), and other furniture of the castle, to be reserved to the king's use; and of all these things they are to cause a chirograph to be made between them and him, and they are to return to the king under a safe conduct which the barons will cause them to have; and on condition that all who are with them in the said castle have safe exit and conduct with their horses and arms and their other things. [Paxera.]

July 10. Grant for life to Master Henry de Lascy, king's serjeant, that he be quit of all tallages assessed in the town of Colecestre.

July 14. Whereas by the form of the peace made between the king of France and the king, the consuls and commonalty of the castle of Limoges are restored to the king's fealty and lordship, the king protests that he caused their fealty to be taken by Bertram de Kardilak, then his seneschal of the Limousin, Périgord and Quercy, for the goods and rights (viribus) which they have and are accustomed to have in the said castle, and that they are bound to do their fealty for this to none but the king and his heirs, as heretofore they were bound to do to none but the king's predecessors, kings of England, when they were in their hands, and thereafter to the kings of France, when they were in their hands.

July 20. Whereas the predecessors of the abbot of St. Martial of the castle of Limoges have been accustomed to take homage only for the things and rights which the vicomte of Limoges holds of the abbot in that castle, and the said abbot, for the said castle, castellany, jurisdiction, lordship, rights and other appurtenances of the said castle, has lately taken the homage of the said vicomte contrary to the usual form, to the prejudice of the right of the king and the consuls and commonalty of the said castle; the king commands John de la Lynde, seneschal
