As peace was lately made between the king and the barons and security was demanded from John de Balliolo for further observance of the said peace, and the said John in the king's presence, of his own free will without cause or judgment of the king's court, committed his castle called Castle Barnard as such security to Hugh le Despenser, saving to R. bishop of Durham, his right and royal liberty, to keep as is agreed between the king and his barons and the said John; the king, for the indemnity of the said bishop of Durham, grants that this shall not prejudice him or his successors.

Safeconduct, until midsummer, by the counsel of the magnates of the Council, for J. son of the duke of Brittany, the king's son, coming to England with his household and goods, and if he cannot come in person through any lawful impediment, the king will give his safe conduct to those whom he sends. [Fœdera.]

March 15. Commitment during pleasure by Edward the king's son to Guy de Brione of the castle of Kermerdin, so that he answer for the issues at the mandate of the said Edward; with mandate to Richard de Tunderle, constable of the said castle, to deliver it to Guy.
And as he has not his own seal to hand, he has procured the king's seal to be appended to these presents.

In like manner the said Edward commands Roger de Mortuo Mari constable of the castle of Kardigan, to deliver it to the said Guy.
In like manner he commands Nicholas son of Martin to deliver the castle of Kilkaran to the said Guy.
And he commands the said Guy to go there and receive them.

March 17. Safe conduct until the quinzaine of Easter for Richard de Tunderle, Roger de Mortuo Mari, yeoman, Nicholas son of Martin and other serjeants in the munition of the castles of Kermerdin, Kardigan and Kilgaran, coming to the king wherever he may be in England.

The like for Warin de Bassingburn, Robert Burnel and Stephen de London, chaplain, going to South Wales on the affairs of Edward the king's son.

The like for two or three of those who are in the castle of Pevonese, summoned by the said Edward to speak with him about the state of the castle.

Whereas there were lately various dissensions between the king and the barons of the realm touching divers articles affecting the state of the king and the realm, for the settlement whereof after the conflict (conflictum) of Lewes, the king gave Edward his son as a hostage, and the said Edward by the assent and will of the king, the prelates and said barons is now delivered from custody; the king, for the tranquility of the realm and security of peace, has committed to him the castles of Dover, Scardeburg, Baunborough, Nottingham and Corfe to be delivered in hostage for five years as well for himself as for the peace and the tranquility of the realm, as is provided in the form made between the king and his son and the said barons. [Fœdera.]

Simple protection until Midsummer for Master John de Claypol.
