Membrane 45—cont.

Grant to William Belet and his heirs of the houses in the parish of St. Giles without the city of London, late of Thomas Viel, sometime citizen of London, the king’s enemy, with lands, rents and other appurtenances, as well within the city as without.

Membrane 44.

Nov. 12. Grant to the king’s clerk, Master William de Fiscampo, leech (medico), of Westminster, of the prebend in the church of York, late of Adam de Belstede, [void] because the said Adam was an adversary of the king and the said Edward in the time of the late disturbance and in the king’s gift by reason of the voidance of the archbishopric of York.

Whereas the king when lately at Hereford pledged to Richard de Hereford certain jewels, to wit, a greater garland and three smaller ones appraised at 260 marks, 10 great brooches appraised at 100 marks, 40 smaller brooches of price appraised at 180 marks, 8 rings with sapphires, and 8 rings with emeralds, appraised at 100 marks, 24 rings with sapphires on one stick and 38 rings with diamonds on two sticks, appraised at 100 marks, for a loan of 500 marks, the said Richard, as the king has ordered the said sum to be paid to him at the Exchequer, has restored all the said jewels to Nicholas de Leukenor, keeper of the wardrobe, in the wardrobe on St. Martin’s Day at Westminster.

Simple protection until a year after Whitsunday for Hamo, prior of Holy Trinity, York, and the convent of that place.

Safe conduct for one year, at the instance of the abbot of Westminster, for John Dissent and Imar the Smith, merchants of Bordeaux, coming to the realm with wines and merchandise, and grant that they be quit of all prises in respect of the wines and merchandise provided that they pay the usual customs.

Protection, without clause, for the following:—

Roger de Luneley, until Midsummer.
Robert de Plessetis, for one year.
William son of Ralph de Herle, until Midsummer.

Whereas the king granted to John Maunsell, treasurer of York, while he was alive, that he might make his will of his goods ecclesiastical and mundane, and his executors should have free administration of his goods, without impediment of the king by reason of any account or reckoning or by reason of any grace granted to the king by the pope touching indefinite legacies; the king wills and commands that all wardships and farms with advowsons of churches and all profits and issues of the same and fruits of ecclesiastical benefices, together with chattels, debts or arrears belonging to the said deceased, in whosoever hands they be, be fully restored to Hugh le Bygod, Robert de Twenge, John de Oketon, brother Simon de Deulacresse, John de Hesel, Simon de Stanbrigg, whom he appointed to be executors of his will for the execution thereof.

Notification that Alesia de Lacy, late the wife of Edmund de Lacy, has paid to Osbert de Beverle, Alexander the Carpenter and John de Spalding, keepers of the king’s works at Westminster, of 355l. 10s. 4d.
