Acknowledgment that John de Maundeville has delivered the 100L wherein he was bound at the Exchequer for his relief, to Richard Monet by the king's special grace.

Whereas the king assigned the tenth of ecclesiastical profits of Ireland granted to him by the pope to Master Sinicius, clerk of the pope's chamber, for the arrears of the pope's yearly cess, to a certain sum, but speedy payment, as the king wished, could not be had, and afterwards the king assigned to him the tenth of the bishopric of Lincoln to the amount of the said arrears; and the said Sinicius has received only 1,100 marks from the said tenth of Ireland because the said tenth was assigned by the pope and the king to the king's consort Eleanor for certain of her debts; although it appears by certain letters patent of Rikus Salveterre and Bartholomew Jacobi, merchants of Florence, fellows of Reiner de Fu' and Thaddeus Orlandi, that the said merchants, at the mandate of the said consort and the said Master Sinicius, received 250 marks in the name of the church of Rome of the sum of 400 marks which the said Master ordered to be paid to them by the bishop of Meath and the dean of Ossory, executors of the business of the tenth in Ireland, because nevertheless in truth the said Master Sinicius has not received the said 250 marks, but the king wills that they be assigned to the queen because the said Master can be fully paid for the said cess out of the tenth of the bishopric of Lincoln; the king confesses that the said Master has received 1,100 marks and no more of the tenth of Ireland, and the king will save him harmless towards the church of Rome touching the said 250 marks.
