Grant to Poncius de la More, buyer of the king's wines, that he may dwell in the realm and that he and his merchants may freely trade in the realm; and exemption of him for life from all tallages, prises, prests, tolls, murages and other issues and demands which could be exacted from him by occasion of his goods and merchandise, as well in the city of London as without.

Exemption for life, at the instance of Robert de la Rogate, of Richard de la Roche from being put on assizes, juries and from being made sheriff, coroner &c. against his will.

Licence, notwithstanding the late provision made by the counsel of Edward the king's son and other magnates of the realm that no Jew should sell a debt due to him by a Christian without the king's licence, and that no Christian purchaser of such debt should have more from it than the king would have if it were in his hand, to wit, the chattel found in the charter thereof without usury; for Manser son of Aaron and Vives son of Abraham, Jews of London, to sell to Stephen de Penecestre a debt wherein John de Pekeham is bound to him. [Federa.]

Grant to Robert Burnel, clerk of the king and of Edward the king's son, and who has taken the cross and is going with the said Edward to the Holy Land, that William de Middfelton and Malcolm de Harle, whom he has appointed in his place before the king, shall be admitted as his attorneys for four years from Midsummer, and that they may make other attorneys at their will.

Licence for Reynold de Pavily, going in like manner with the said Edward, to let to farm his manors of Westbury and Broc, co. Wilts, which he holds in chief with other lands, for four years from the Annunciation.

Grant, at the instance of Edward the king's son, to Edmund the king's son of Aaron son of Vives, Jew, with all his goods, debts and chattels, quit of all tallages, aids, prests, and demands; to hold with all liberties, laws and customs of the Jewry of England. The king wills also that the said Aaron shall have a chest wherein to deposit his chirographs in the place where he shall dwell in the lands of the said Edmund, according to the law and custom of the Jewry, and that the king's ministers shall levy such debts due to him now or hereafter as he shall shew to be due by chirographs or letters patent.

Pardon, at the instance of Richard de la Rokele, to Nicholas de la Rokele for the death of Roger Punchard, Richard le Serjaunt and Saer de Biry, and of any consequent outlawry.

Exemption for life, at the instance of William Belet, of Bertram Guterin and Menaudus his brother, merchants of Bessaze, from distraint for any debt whereof they are not sureties or principal debtors; and grant that they may carry on trade quit of all prises and prests; saving to the king the due and ancient prises.