Reading.
Grant to Ellis de Rabeyn of 100l. wherein John de Maundevill is bound to the king in respect of the relief of Geoffrey de Maundeville his father, whose heir he is, or of what belongs to the king of the said relief.

To Master John de Sancto Dyonisio, king's clerk. Whereas the king, for divers debts wherein R. le Bygot, sometime earl of Norfolk and marshal of England, was bound to the king in many ways, the king sent the said John to take into the king's hands the goods of the earl and to keep them safe until the king should be fully satisfied the said debts, and lately at Reading there was a discussion before the king and council, by Roger, now earl of Norfolk and one of the executors of the deceased earl, of the granting to the now earl of the said goods according to their price and value (de precio et valore ipsorum) provided that this should be done with the will of the other executors who were not then present, and saving fully to the king his said debts, for which cause it was there ordered that the said earl and those of the executors who could be present should meet at a certain day and place in Norfolk and in the presence of one of the king's clerks treat of the said business together. The king has therefore appointed him to be present at the said discussion and to take full security in the king's name from the said executors or the earl, or both, according to the issue of the said discussion, touching the king's debts, or touching the chattels, if any have been removed or dispersed by the earl or the said executors, that they will come to London on the octaves of St. Hilary without further delay: so that neither the earl nor the said executors lay their hands on the said goods unless they have first given the said security.

Further, the king wills that in the meantime his said clerk view the said goods and provide for their safe keeping and if any have been removed or aliened, cause them to be recovered in full. The sheriff of Norfolk has been commanded to assist as required by the said clerk.

Wherwell.
Whereas after the death of Almaric de Croun the king took the manor of Burne into his hands and afterwards granted it so far as he could to Queen Eleanor, his consort, to hold for her life without sale or alienation, and the king is now informed that the said manor belongs of hereditary right to his nephew Maurice de Croun, as nephew and heir of the said Almaric, who is of full age, for which cause he wishes to satisfy him as he is bound; grant to the said Maurice of 40l. a year at the Exchequer so long as the said manor is in the queen's hands, and as soon as it is out of her hands, he is to hold the manor as his right and inheritance without contradiction.

Simple protection without clause, for two years, for William de Braybrok.
