Whereas the king granted to Walter Giffard, archbishop of York, then bishop of Bath and Wells, the castle of Oxford with the meadow and mills, and the manors of Breull and Tidinton, answering for the issues or farm thereof at the Exchequer, and afterwards, because of the disturbance in the realm, ordered him to maintain the said castle with serjeants at arms and victuals, and the said Walter applied great cost in this; the king, considering that if any account of this were held, he would be bound in more to the said Walter in costs than the said issues are worth, pardons to him all accounts, issues, farms, reckonings and arrears which could be required of him by reason of the keeping of the castle &c. for the whole of that time.
