Protection, during pleasure, for Master Nicholas de Hereford, clerk, professor of theology, and his men and possessions; as, moved by conscience, in his sermons and preachings, private and open, he is manfully opposing the disciples of Anti-Christ who strive to attract not only laymen but even clergy and literates to their heresies, and many rivals of his, members of Anti-Christ, are suing and propose to sue false quarrels against him in temporal courts and thereby to imprison and destroy him, to the end that they may continue the destruction of the Christian faith without resistance.
