Whereas at the time when the king was last in Wales John Russell of Bristol was appointed by certain ministers of the king to carry in a crayer a certain victuals to the castle of Coitif in Wales for its victualling, viz, four ways of beans and three ways and four quarters of malt, of which at Ogmore by Coitif he delivered two ways of the malt to the king’s esquire William Rye, sergeant of the bakery, and afterwards when he returned to the crayer to bring the remainder to land a great tempest arose so suddenly that he could scarcely enter the crayer and the boat of the crayer was swamped and its cables broken, the king pardons to the said John the said four ways of beans and the residue of the malt.
