Revocation of letters patent dated 9 August, 6 Henry IV, committed to Thomas Brounflete, ‘chivaler,’ and Robert Hilton, ‘chivaler,’ the keeping of all lands of Thomas Faucomerbe, ‘chivaler,’ within the realm, in the king’s hands by reason of his idiocy; as the said Thomas Faucomberge personally appeared before the king and council in Chancery and prayed that the letters might be revoked, as he was and always had been sane and the lands had descended to him on the death of Walter Faucomberge his father and he had continued his possession until he was removed by colour of the letters; and he was examined and seemed to the king and council to be of sound mind, and the king accordingly directed the sheriff of York to summon the said Thomas Brounflete and Robert to appear before him in Chancery at a certain day now past to show cause why the letters should not be revoked, and the sheriff returned that he summoned them by Thomas Santon, Richard de Santon, William Clerk, and John Oustyby, and they did not appear and judgement was given against them.
