Revocation of letters patent dated 24 November, 7 Henry IV, granting to William Walton the office of forester within the forest of Pykerynglith late of Robert Perceay. Afterwards on 17 February, 8 Henry IV, by other letters patent the king pardoned the said Robert by the name of Robert Percehay, 'chivaler'; and at the suit of the latter, complaining that although he was not convicted of treason, insurrection or rising or outlawed on these accounts whereby he should forfeit to the king still he was removed from the office by colour of the letters to the said William, the king directed the sheriff of York to summon the said William to appear before him in Chancery at a certain day now past to show cause why the letters should not be revoked and the said Robert restored to possession. The sheriff returned that he ordered full return of the writ to Roger de Middelwod, bailiff of the liberty of Pykeryng, who gave no answer, and the king by another writ ordered the sheriff to enter the liberty and summon the said William to appear at another day now past, and the sheriff returned that he summoned him by John de Sutton, William Scalby, John de Chestre and Roger de Middelwod, and he appeared in person and the said Robert appeared by Robert Watton his attorney and William could say nothing and judgement was given against him.
