the octaves of Hilary last against the said Richard, then patron by title of descent by reason of divers presentations by his ancestors, and the process was continued until the abbot recovered the advowson by default after they put themselves on the great assize, and afterwards it was found by verdict of a jury between the king and the abbot that there was no collusion between the abbot and Richard and judgement was given that the abbot should have execution, but the church is without the precinct and body of the county of Salop and in the county of Flynt in Wales and impleadable before the king’s justices of the county of Flynt and not at the common law of England; the king pardons to the abbot the suit before the said justices at Westminster, and confirms his estate in the advowson as though he had recovered it before the said justices of the county of Flynt.

Feb. 18. Whereas John Hevenyngham, 'chivaler,' late sheriff of Norfolk and Westminster. Suffolke, is charged in his account in the Exchequer with 100l. called the old increment of the counties, which he has lost because it is not known where any money of it can be levied, and has lost divers other sums because certain hundreds and other profits of the counties are given to divers lords and other persons and other divers hundreds extended of old time at certain sums are not at present of that value but nevertheless he is charged with the old extent; the king, in consideration of the premises and of his other losses in office, pardons to him the said 100l. and 60l. for the losses of hundreds and profits.

Vacated by surrender and cancelled.
