Nov. 8. It has been shown to the council by Elizabeth, wife of William Westminster. Ryman, that king Henry V, both by his own letters and by mandate given on his behalf by the duke of Gloucester, commanded the said William and Elizabeth that she should come to that king in his realm of France to do service about the person of the present king's mother; the said Elizabeth accordingly came to the said late king at Paris, and attended the present king's mother until he was born: at which time the said late king charged the said Elizabeth to watch and attend on the present king's person; which service she has continually performed without fee or reward to her importable charge, and the great derogation of her husband and herself. The king considering the premises and her services to his father and mother, whereby she has fallen into such infirmity, old age and weakness that she can no more labour, by advice of his council, has granted, during pleasure, to the said Elizabeth 20*l.* a year out of the fee farm of the town of Notyngnam, by the hands of the mayor and bailiffs there; notwithstanding that she has, by grant of Henry IV, 20*l.* a year for life out of the issues and profits of the county of Norfolk; and, by grant of Henry V, confirmed by the present king, the manor of Oldeshorham, co. Sussex, for life.
