pain and damage, as was proved on examination before certain lords and other notable men of the realm at Calais, and as more fully may appear by letters testimonial under the seal of the mayor of the town remaining of record with the council, for which misfortune and betrayal of the said

Letters of privy seal dated at Westminster, 5 November, 4 Henry VI, were directed to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer to pay by way of loan to Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, 5,000 marks out of the moiety of a tenth then granted to the king by the clergy of the province of Canterbury: provided that he gave bond in the Chancery to repay the same on the king reaching the age of 15 years. The king by advice of the council and other notables now pardons him the said sum in consideration of his charges in bringing relief to Calais against the self-styled duke of Burgundy and his power, and desires the chancellor to cause the bond referred to, and any other entries or processes made or to be made touching the said sum to be destroyed.
