

The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, con-sacrat ed Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1344, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1349. His work gives a full account of the views of the Lollard, and has great value for the philologist.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in 1157 and come down to 1188. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster.

These volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John.

The Topographia Hiberica (in Vol. III.) is a result of Geraldus' two visits to Ireland, the first in 1184, and the second in 1185-6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. The Itinerarium Hibernicum was written about 1185-6. Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium. Vol. VII. consists of Descriptio Cambriae; and Vol. VIII., the lives of S. Remigius and S. Hugh. Vol. VIII. contains the Treatise De Principum Instructibus, and an index to Vols. I.-IV. and VIII.

23. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, according to the several original authorities. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by Benjamin Thorpe, Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

There are at present six independent manuscripts of the saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography.

The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III., correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

The letters of Robert Grosseteste range in date from about 1210 to 1233. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.
