Commission to Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, Edmund, bishop of Exeter, chancellor, Richard Lescrope, bishop of Coventry and Liechfield, Richard Lescrope, John Lovell, Walter Clopton, William Thirnyng and John Markham, reciting that by the agreement made before the said archbishop, then archbishop of York, chancellor of the king, and William Thirnyng, justice of the Common Bench, for the settlement of the long and costly dispute between John, bishop of Ely, and the abbot and convent of Rameseye, the bishop at great expense caused the churches of Shutlyngdon and Thurfeld, of the abbot and convent's patronage, to be appropriated with the king's licence to the said abbot and convent; that the latter after the agreement alienated the advowsons to certain persons for a long term of years contrary to the terms of the agreement, and that they thereby hindered the fulfilment of the agreement, whereupon the king with the assent of the prelates and magnates in the present Parliament ordaining the observance of the said agreement, requires the commissioners to inspect the same and compel both parties to observe it, notwithstanding any alienation or demise by the abbot and convent, or any title or interest of the king in the said advowsons by reason of the judgment rendered in Parliament against Thomas Haxey, to whom the advowson of Thurfeld was granted by the abbot and convent. By petition in Parl.
