Grant to John, archbishop of Armagh, in consideration of his fidelity in the despatch of the king's affairs for safe keeping Ireland, of restitution of the priory called 'Blakpriorie' of St. Andrew in Arle in Ulster, which Richard, late archbishop of Armagh, acquired under a general licence of the Pope and the late king from the abbot and convent of Lonleye in Normandy, in augmentation of the temporalities of his archbishopric, and which after his death was seised into the late king's hands on account of the war with France, until one Thomas, monk of Normandy, a Frenchman, took it to farm at a yearly rent payable at the Exchequer of Ireland, without mention made of the right of the church of Armagh. The said John has petitioned the justiciary and others of the king's Council in Ireland and obtained a writ of seire facias against the said Thomas to appear and show cause why the priory should not be delivered to the said archbishop, and on his default it was decreed by the chancellor that it should be restored as parcel of the said temporalities, and writs were issued to Edmund Savage, steward of Ulster, to deliver it accordingly, which the said Edmund has refused to do, holding it by force of arms, the said John, by suit to the king, having received a farm of the priory during the said war for the purpose of retaining his possession thereof. But he and his successors are to account yearly for the farms, issues and profits of the priory, so long as the war lasts.
